

Media Content Creator

Cov.help was founded a couple of weeks ago and gathers students willing to do their bit to help Belgian SMEs throughout the crisis. We are dedicated to putting our learnt skills into practice to render small Belgian businesses agile and resilient.

Are you a student or young worker/graduate with some spare time? Are you willing to contribute to a fast-paced recovery from the current situation? If yes, we would be glad to have you on board.

We are now planning on having our own content creation department so that our consulting teams can leverage these capabilities to implement the digital solutions proposed to our clients.

What you'll do:

- Conduct meetings with consulting team;
- Create visual media content according to the decisions made by the consulting teams;
- Be part of a growing business service on which our entire organization relies.

Who you are

- You are a third-year bachelor's student or a master's student, preferably in communications, architecture, digital marketing, infographics or audio-visual studies.
- You are comfortable with using classic content creation tools such as Photoshop, InDesign, and video-making softwares.
- You are willing to commit around 7 hours a week for this project

What you'll get

- Invaluable Thank you's from the businesses we help
- An opportunity to meet students scattered across the entire country & to extend your network
- A great experience which you will be able to value in your track record
- Attend exclusive events with experienced professionals

Application process

- Write us a short motivational statement via the contact form on the website stating your availabilities and the reasons underlying your willingness to join
